

Short Bio

Tami O. Zafeiropoulou (b. 1994) is a visual artist and educator based between London and Athens. Her practice explores trauma, inherited memory, and the human psyche through visceral forms and materiality. Working primarily with clay, alongside performance, writing, textiles, painting and sound, she gives voice to experiences that resist verbal expression while challenging socio-political structures. Her work has been exhibited internationally and is held in private collections. She is currently pursuing an MFA in Arts & Humanities at the Royal College of Art.